JOIN THE MANUFACTURED HOUSING INSTITUTE

In the past few years, there has been an unprecedented amount of new regulations that have had a widespread impact on every industry, and manufactured and modular housing are no exception. MHI focuses on these regulations and many other important issues relating to our industry:

- Regulatory Reform – MHI strives to improve government regulations in order to enhance the quality and streamline the performance of the industry
- Advocacy – MHI supports causes and proposals that directly affect the industry
- Education – MHI provides and facilitates educational and continuing education programs to help members gain knowledge and/or skills relating to the industry through dynamic learning processes
- Networking – MHI facilitates and promotes the exchange of information or services among members, specifically for the cultivation of productive relationships for mutual benefits

MHI is recognized as a leader by the federal government and housing related groups that shape the manufactured and modular housing industry's future policies and practices by focusing on a number of issues such as:

- Reform of the Dodd-Frank Act and Consumer Financial Protection Bureau (CFPB) provisions that limit access to credit for those seeking to purchase/sell manufactured homes
- Reform of the government sponsored entities (GSE) and the housing finance system to ensure open access to a secondary market for manufactured home loans secured by personal property
- Extension and expansion of New Energy Efficient Home Credit for manufactured and modular homes
- Reform Department of Energy (DOE) Energy Efficiency Standards for manufactured housing required under the Energy Independence and Security Act of 2007 (EISA) to prevent dual enforcement system and standard that harms manufactured housing affordability
- Improve HUD administration and management of its manufactured housing program

Manufacturers, suppliers, lenders, insurers, community owners and managers, retailers and state associations can join through the following divisions and councils:

- Federated States Division
- Financial Services Division
- Manufactured Housing Division
- National Communities Council
- National Modular Housing Council
- National Retailers Council
